

Dramatic Images: the Roof Bosses of Norwich Cathedral in relation to the Drama of the Middle Ages

This booklet explores the fascinating relationship between Norfolk medieval drama and the medieval roof bosses at Norwich Cathedral. It is beyond question that the craftsmen concerned with the building and decorating of the cathedral would have been among the audience or even have acted themselves in the medieval drama of their time. The aim of the study is to consider the roof bosses of Norwich cathedral in relation to the drama of the period. Towards this end a thumbnail sketch will be given of the development of drama in England during the Middle Ages to serve as a background to the manifestation of that art form in East Anglia at the time of the carving of the bosses.
