TRAVELS IN TIME 1 222 Vintage Travel Posters From Around The World 1870-1970 In the 1890s, poster art had widespread usage in the United States and Europe, advertising everything from bicycles to bullfights. Many posters have had great artistic merit. These include the posters advertising consumer products, travel and entertainment, but also events like the Worlds Fairs and Colonial Exhibitions. Posters advertising or proposing a travel destination, or simply artistically articulating a place have been produced since the 1850s. An example is the Beach Town Posters series, some of which will be found in this and other books of the Travels in Time series, a collection of Art Deco travel posters of American beach resorts that refer to the advertising style of the 1920s and 1930s. In the early days of steam railways in Britain and the United States, the various rail companies advertised their routes and services on simple printed sheets. By the 1850s, with increasing competition and improvements in printing technology, pictorial designs were being incorporated in their advertising posters. The use of graphic artists began to influence the design of the pictorial poster. In 1905, the London and North Western Railway (LNWR) commissioned Norman Wilkinson to produce artwork for a new landscape poster, advertising their rail/steam packet link to Ireland. In 1908, for the Great Northern Railway (GNR), John Hassall produced the famous image of the Jolly Fisherman with the Skegness is so Bracing slogan. Look for it and literally hundreds of other great railway, cruise ship, airline and destination posters in this collection of travel posters from around the world
