

Progger: A life on the marsh

Tony Florio worked for the Delaware Game and Fish Commission as a wildlife biologist for thirty-eight years, during which time he was an active nature photographer and also a wildlife and historical artist. Most of his artwork was limited to scratchboard... a black and white medium that is ideal for high detail drawings and which reproduces well. For thirty-two years Tony and his wife, Pat, lived at the Woodland Beach Wildlife Area where they raised their three children, Gwen, Roger, and Kathleen...along with a host of furred and feathered friends. Following his retirement Tony and Pat moved to Vermonts Northeast Kingdom where Tony continues to photograph, write and draw.
