

Round the world in a wheelchair

In May 1996 the authors husband, Noel, suffered a very serious stroke which left him permanently disabled and a wheelchair user. Over the next fourteen years they not only learned to deal with the situation mentally and physically but went on to travel all over the world - places as far apart as Australia and Alaska, China and the Falkland Islands, and many destinations between. Noel was wheeled around many of the worlds major cities. They took the wheelchair up high buildings and mountains and travelled on a varied forms of transport. The reader is invited to experience the enjoyment of their adventures and the background information about the places they visited. If you, the reader, are in a similar situation we hope to inspire you and make you realise how much is possible.
